About Our School

Our scholars are the center of our school through an individualized and personalized education where we know all of our scholars' interests and needs. From online learning, field trips, and solving real-world problems, scholars believe that what they are learning in school is relevant to the real world. They are empowered to be leaders within the school community by taking responsibility in shaping their middle school experience. Scholars voice their interests in the programming of the arts, after-school programs, and Advisory. Our school focuses on the needs of each scholar through individualized learning plans for all scholars. We prepare scholars for life beyond school through the integration of technology in our online classes, partnerships with cultural and arts institutions, and field trips. Our parents are part of the school community through an open-door policy which welcomes them to visit New Heights Middle School. Through the Advisory Program, they have a primary point of contact who knows their child's academic, social, and emotional progress. Additionally, they are kept well-informed on a weekly basis of their child's progress. We use technology to engage scholars in a challenging curriculum where scholars solve real-world problems in science and social studies. Online learning offers scholars opportunities to connect with the global community and work at their own pace towards attaining their individual goals. We will host a scholar summer academy to get to know our scholars before the school year begins.
